'Worn [new work 2015/16) is an exploration into change and how things transform over time. Our aim is to explore how the body is affected by time & space, (environment) and to reveal how a lifetime of association can affect the paths we take, choices we make, or are forced to, in our lives. "Are we in control of our own destiny or merely at the mercy of our surroundings, being blown from one place to another with no real rhyme or reason in a random response to the world that surrounds us?"

As mature artists we identify with the concept behind this new work, even at the simplest level of how we maintain our own creative voices, who are we and is this what we wanted? These are common questions people ask of themselves at different stages in their own lives. Once you strip back the layers of your history do you recognize yourself? These are exciting questions to ask, even more so for an experienced co-creative team who have spent over a quarter of a century together

We create performances of the highest quality and our work demands that we are of the highest physical standard that in turn allows our artistry to flourish. We endeavor to make work that engages audiences on a physical and emotional level that is felt whilst allowing the subtleties of the theatricality within our work to take the audience on a journey without the necessity of a more traditional and conventional 'theatre' narrative.
